1	No, just wish I could come more often!	5/16/2015 7:24 PM
2	I enjoy the discussions that take place at clinics...I would like to see "shorter, condensed" explanations though. My horse benefits from the rests while the discussions take place, but I have noticed that often a glazed look is seen on riders as they zone out...I like the talks...helps me to understand things ....doesn't work for everyone though? Possibly a deterrent to not come back?	5/16/2015 11:26 AM
3	No... love the lessons. Love the fact that my daughter wants to text her Sunday night and report her results. Love that as a mum I can bounce ideas off her. The ear piece is the best thing she has ever brought.	5/16/2015 11:07 AM

6	The mic system is fantastic, the kids dont feel like you are yelling at them like other coaches do. We like that you can communicate privately so that you get an honest response rather than the "what mum wants me to say" response.	5/15/2015 12:02 PM

18	I LOVEEEEEEEEE every lesson I have had with Cheski and they have all been sooo different. She can see what we need before we have even started our lesson. So looking forward to training more with her this year and many more I hope.	5/12/2015 5:23 PM
19	Nope I am pushed to just the right amount out of my comfort zone.	5/12/2015 5:07 PM
20	Gosh it is great value. The ear piece is a good investment.	5/12/2015 2:32 PM
21	no - she is the master - i have never had a lesson from cheski (and i've had a tremendous amount over the years) where i haven't enjoyed and valued every minute she had been coaching me	5/12/2015 2:10 PM
22	Not really - I really like the way Cheski adapts to the situation and is constantly learning (from others) & bringing those things learnt to the lessons. One of the best things Cheski told me was that if something wasn't working, try something different to get a result different result. I also feel like sessions are just for me and there's not a 'one size fits all' approach.	5/12/2015 12:16 PM
23	I get excellent value at all times thank you.	5/12/2015 11:21 AM
24	Nothing really.	5/12/2015 10:11 AM
